WELCOME ADDRESS

Aloha and welcome to the annual Arts, Humanities, Social Sciences and Education Conference held at the Ala Moana Hotel on the island of Oahu. We trust that you will gain new experiences and new insights in your field of study while interacting with your peers. This is an exciting opportunity to meet with educators from different universities throughout the nation and throughout the world. They bring with them a wealth of knowledge and experience in their particular disciplines to share with each and every one.

We hope you enjoy your stay with our host, the Ala Moana Hotel, a prime location in the Ala Moana area of Honolulu offering a wide variety of shops and attractions.

The famous Waikiki Beach and prime restaurants are close by for your convenience. Be sure to check with the hotel’s activity desk for all the latest adventures and tours to make your trip to the Hawaiian Islands a memorable experience.

The Islands of Hawaii offer a very unique experience for all people who visit to gain a better understanding of the Hawaiian culture and its spirit only found in these islands. Enjoy some of the best weather and beaches found anywhere in the world, and take your experiences home with you to return another day.

E’ Komo Mai!

DAY 1

Saturday - January 03, 2015
Coping With Pain: Changing the Paradigm

Synopsis:

All human beings know what it feels like to be in physical pain, emotional distress, or psychological discomfort, as well knowing what it’s like to experience times of grief, sorrow, anxiety, fear, depression, loneliness, heartache, and loss. We all can relate on a human level to these situations, and no one likes or enjoys being in pain. Each one of us has needs we want to fill, and we all search for answers, relief, and a way to ease our troubles. Most of us “self-medicate” to one degree or another, through various means: caffeine, tobacco, alcohol, marijuana, other drugs, shopping, unhealthy relationships, gambling, undo exercise, binging/purging, excessive eating, and many others. This keynote address will explore how very much we all are alike as human beings, the process of addictions, and the concept of a much more holistic approach and mindset to finding balance and wellness.
I. International Students from China: Motivations, Challenges, and U.S. Admission Policies

This paper addresses issues related to Chinese students applying for admission to American postsecondary institutions. Specifically the paper discusses issues of alleged cheating, the use of educational agents, and the widespread use of shadow education. The paper provides some policies to assist students to find appropriate institutions.

Author/Presenter: Dr. Linda Serra Hagedorn
College of Human Sciences
Iowa State University

II. The Assessment and Improvement of Public Presentation Confidence and Competence in Business School Undergraduate Students

Most assessment of communication competence and confidence in undergraduate business school students explicitly evaluates students’ competencies in written, not oral, communication. This research seeks to close this loop by assessing student confidence in public presentation as well as the group and individual public presentation competence of undergraduate business school students and constructing appropriate interventions for improvement.

III. An Exploration of Authentic Leadership from Oppositional Perspectives: Faith versus Non-Faith Based

The study explores leadership from two very different perspectives, that of faith-based versus non-faith-based. It sheds light on the way authentic leadership is perceived both generally and specifically and was able to draw some generalizable conclusions on the observations collected, that authentic leadership does not reflect faith or religion; rather, it stems from a humanistic psychological/philosophical approach, which is applicable to each and every human being.

II. The “Whiter Foster Sister Fails”: Interracial Sisterhood is a Myth in Harriet Jacobs’ Incidents in the Life of a Slave Girl

Harriet Jacobs’ autobiographical slave narrative Incidents in the Life of a Slave Girl, ostensibly makes tactful use of the widespread assumption of white feminists of the time who believed in interracial sisterhood. This study, however, detects discomfort with this idealistic notion of sisterhood and so focuses on the slips Jacobs makes.

II. Are You Serious?: An Analysis of Unemployment and Illegal Employment of Japanese Youth Generations From a Semantic View Point

This paper analyzes two types of the Japanese youth: the high unemployment rates of young Japanese people and illegal business activities conducted by youth from a linguistic point of view and its effects to social acceptances. Instead of facing this reality, the Japanese have started using Katakana words (loanwords) to describe negative aspects to more socially acceptable modes. They also expand meanings of words to neutralize negative connotations.

Author/Presenter: Ms. Yumi Adachi

I. The Effects of Congruity on Sponsorship Brand in Regional Festival

The purpose of the study is to analyze the congruity effects of sponsorship in regional festival. The concept of congruity was divided into two constructs(self-congruity with sponsoring brand, congruity between sponsoring brand and festival). As a result, two constructs of congruity had a positive effect on brand attitude, and brand attitude had a positive influence on brand loyalty. However, these two constructs didn't have significant effects on brand loyalty.

3. Community Service and Study Abroad

Community service can be an important part of students’ study abroad learning experience. Making contacts within the host culture (schools, local chapters of US organizations, and various shelters) is a good way to get started. Getting into new cultural areas and situations helps students get a unique perspective on cultural differences that may or may not otherwise be apparent and offers them experiences of a lifetime.

4. Predicting Social and Physical Quality of Life among Hispanic and Non-Hispanic Older Women

In the present study, we examined older women’s social/relational quality of life and physical health in relation to social support as well as cultural status. Key social support and cultural status variables showed significant associations with both physical health and social quality of life outcomes. Hispanic women’s cultural status was more likely to be associated with physical health outcomes, whereas non-Hispanic women’s cultural status was more likely to be associated with social quality of life outcomes.

10. Motivating Citizen Preparedness: An Evaluation of Barriers to Disaster Preparedness

This study examines lack of disaster preparedness among citizens, and seeks to understand the barriers that prevent such preparation. Relying on survey and experimental data, we compare three modes of communicating disaster preparedness: FEMA's current checklist, a visual example of an emergency kit, and a survivor's story. We find that alternative messaging techniques are more likely to improve recall of the contents of a kit and lead respondents to feel a greater sense of urgency.

12. The Relationships Between Patients’ and Caregivers’ Beliefs About the Causes of Schizophrenia and Clinical Outcomes in Latin American Countries

We investigated 3 belief systems in relation to the severity of symptoms, and to attitudes towards medications.

We recruited 253 patients with schizophrenia and their caregivers from public mental health clinics in Bolivia, Chile, and Peru.

Results show that patients’ belief systems are significant predictors of symptom severity and medication attitudes.

Future research should attend to the ethical considerations involved in intervening on belief systems cross-culturally.

17. Utilizing Systems Thinking and Concept Mapping to Identify Interdisciplinary Research Opportunities: Considering the Effects of Light on Meat Products

In the current project, the research team hypothesized that allied disciplines may contribute towards the formulation of novel research opportunities and partnerships. To seek opportunities for interdisciplinary collaboration, researchers collected information about current areas of interest and expertise from seven faculty members in the fields of (1) Hotel and Restaurant Administration; (2) Interior Design; and (3) Merchandising at a large university in the South Central U.S. Systems thinking becomes easier to visualize with the use of concept mapping techniques, e.g. Visual Understanding Environment (VUE) software. Preliminary findings indicate research areas are clustered in (1) Health and Food Safety, (2) Consumer Behavior (3) Sustainability, and (4) Lighting Application. The interrelationship among these may suggest the pursuit of collaborative research grants for future funding.

III. Relieving Yeats’s Anxiety over Age: Sexual Inspiration as Creation

As early as twenty-one, Yeats viewed aging as a vice to his carefree, youthful imagination. Yet, as he matured, Yeats's style and tone took an innovative turn. The youth who once emphasized gentle and pure feminine beauty became enthralled with women as sexual forces. That is, as Yeats approached life's end, the revitalization of his sexual energy facilitated in awakening a different creative artistry, subduing the fears of castration and loss of integrity he held onto for most of his life.

I. The Female Nudes of Suzanne Valadon

French artist Suzanne Valadon (1865-1938), one of the few women artists of the status of Mary Cassatt and Berthe Morisot who has not yet received due attention, is the object of this study. Valadon, a working-class artist and model, grew up on the streets of Montmartre and learned to paint while watching male artists such as Renoir and Toulouse-Lautrec paint her own body. She produced a body of work dominated by images of the female nude from adolescence to old age. Her nudes disclose versions of female desire and the construction of a female bodily identity at odds with the naturalized conventions in the genre of the female nude. This chapter opens with a brief overview of the genre of the female nude and then introduces a range of discourses on the body as they relate to Valadon’s work.

I. The Power of Creation Over Trauma: Personality Factors and the Impotency of PTSD

This study investigated the effects of personality factors on traumatic exposure and adaptation. The researcher conducted clinical interviews with seven creative individuals. Results were analyzed utilizing a combination of descriptive statistics with qualitative analysis. The hypothesis was supported. All participants reported traumatic exposures. None were clinically impaired, which suggests both locus-of-control and creativity may mitigate possible clinical impairment after exposure.

II. An Aboriginal Rewriting of the Colonial Encounter in Mudrooroo Narogin's Doctor Wooreddy's Prescription for Enduring the Ending of the World

Narogin's novel is worthy of note because it is a postcolonial writing back to the tradition of white Australian literature. The novel foregrounds the hitherto silenced voice of native Australians, debunking all the paternalistic concepts of civilizing mission and common humanity. From a reversed point of view, European settlers are put under the scrutiny of the Aborigines to become the object of sardonic rewriting. It is white Europeans, not the Aborigines, who are truly barbarian and alien.

I. Lines and Notes: A Synergistic Collision of Music and Poetry

Lines and Notes is a collaborative exhibition with pianist Terrie Manno and poet Kevin Zepper. In some selections, poems become movements based on a theme. Other works are the realization of random words and musical phrases based on author William S. Burroughs cut-up method. Some of their work is specific to each audience: newspaper clippings from local and school papers, and "lines" from the audience arranged into poetry. Each piece is the result of an interdisciplinary exploration.

I. A Modern Percussion Edition of Darius Milhaud's LA CRÉATION DU MONDE

Preparing a performance of La création du monde can be daunting, as the parts are rental-only, heavy in errata, and marked in French. The wind and string instrumentation is frugal, allowing the assembly of a small but necessarily facile ensemble—yet it is the percussion writing itself that could lead one to ignore the work. We hope to change the minds of those who have done so by offering a primer of sorts for interested percussionists.

I. Recidivism in the State of Louisiana: An Analysis of 3 and 5-Year Recidivism Rates Among Long-Serving Inmates

We examine recidivism rates for inmates who have served long sentences in Louisiana. Results show that recidivism involving new crimes is very low (about 2%) for 1st degree murders and nonexistent for 2nd degree murderers among those who have been pardoned and later released. The report also finds that recidivism declines with age and with the length of the sentence served. We discuss the implications of the findings for the risk of release of older offenders.

III. “M.U.S.I.C. (Mentoring Undergraduate Student Interns through Collaboration)”: Incorporating a Traditional Student Internship into a Contemporary Marketing and Publicity Plan

Each year college students anxiously seek off-campus internships to obtain career experience relevant to their studies. However, as a growing number of university and college music programs are forced to implement aggressive promotional campaigns with limited funding, one school is piloting a new student internship that plays a key role in the marketing and publicity goals of its Music Department. Using Birmingham-Southern College’s newly developed M.U.S.I.C. (Mentoring Undergraduate Student Interns through Collaboration) Internship as a model, this paper presents an alternative to the traditional three-way partnership between a student, the college, and an internship provider in a supervised, off-campus work environment.

I. The Monomyth Hero in East and West

Joseph Campbell's 'Monomyth' is arguably the most powerful narrative architecture in the classics of the western canon. Its compelling effect makes stories such as the Odyssey, Beowulf, and The Lord of the Rings so powerfully moving. But is it applicable in reading non-Western texts as well? This paper assesses the usefulness of the Monomyth in reading classical Chinese texts such as Journey to the West, and considers whether the use of the Monomyth is in some way a 'universally human' trait.

Monday - January 05, 2015
In 2004, Muliufi ‘Mufi’ Hannemann was elected as the 12th Mayor of the City and County of Honolulu. He was re-elected to a second term in 2008. Mayor Hannemann’s mantra as he took office was to “leave Honolulu better than he found it” and this was an idea that he instilled in his cabinet members and his administration. As Mayor, he won national awards from the US Conference of Mayors, American Public Transportation Association, Americans for the Arts and was cited as Honolulu’s Best Public Official.

After graduating with honors from Harvard, he continued his studies as a Fulbright Scholar and used the opportunity to study Government at Victoria University in Wellington, New Zealand. Later, he returned to Honolulu to become an educator/coach at his alma mater, Iolani School. He also served in the administrations and cabinets of two Hawaii Governors, was chair of the Honolulu City Council and was an executive in private business with one of Hawaii’s leading agri-business firms and was the President and CEO of the Hawaii Lodging and Tourism Association.

Mufi Hannemann has the unique distinction of having served in four Presidential Administrations – Carter, Reagan, Clinton, and Bush in a number of appointed capacities. Under President Carter, Mufi was a special assistant in the U.S. Department of the Interior’s Office of Territorial and International Affairs. During the Reagan administration, Mufi was selected as a White House Fellow working with Vice President George H.W. Bush. President Clinton nominated Mufi to be the U.S. Representative to the South Pacific Commission under the U.S Department of State. During the tenure of President George W. Bush, U.S. Labor Secretary Elaine Chao appointed Mufi to the Advisory Committee on Apprenticeship and the 21st Century Work Force.

Presently, Mufi Hannemann is the Principal of MFH Enterprises, a professional consulting firm that does business in Hawaii and the Pacific - Asian Basin, heads up a non-profit group, the Pacific Century Fellows, a leadership initiative for young professionals, mentors and provides thousands of dollars of scholarships and awards annually to local high school graduates, hosts a weekly radio show on 107.9 FM and writes a weekly column in Midweek on island matters.

I. When Can Hong Kong Democratize? When Should China?

Beijing’s interests limit HK’s democratization, but these include hopes for Taiwanese and HK democrats. Hong Kong’s odd democratization can be related to comparative findings (Schattschneider, Lipset, Dahl, Rustow, Huntington, Przeworski, Boix, Rigger, Kuran, others). Local information comes from J. Cheng, W.M. Lam, L. Goodstadt, S. Pepper, S.H. Lo, others. HK democrats’ plans would work well under HK’s rule of law, but mass elections in China now could legitimate illiberal demagogues.

II. A Warrior’s Vision: Responding to the Call to Decolonize Indigenous Identities

Mohawk scholar, Patricia Monture-Angus argued that Canadian law held neither hope nor power for redress to colonial oppression. Monture reminded Indigenous people of the necessity to move beyond resistance to oppression, and to construct a new vision of ourselves as Indigenous peoples. We explore recent Canadian legislation, scholarship, and social mobilization, to ascertain contributions to the fulfilment of this vision. Maori constructions of belonging may illustrate new pathways of inclusion.

I. Using Community Resources in Creative University Class Assignments

This paper documents the outcomes of two very different class assignments, one in Historical Archaeology, the other in Applied Anthropology. In the former, students studied the historic site of the first mission in the central Okanagan BC, Canada with the objective of understanding the impact of European settlement on the local indigenous people. In the second assignment, students visited a First Nation reserve in the north Okanagan to learn firsthand about local socio-economic challenges; they subsequently created business proposals for the community.

II. Feminist Pedagogy in University Classroom: Understanding the Classroom as a Place Where Knowledge is Created as Opposed to Knowledge Being Delivered to Students

The purpose of this paper is to look at Feminist Pedagogy, which is an exploratory and interactive form of teaching. This paper compares feminist pedagogy in contrast to the traditional method of teaching—lecturing, so I will use it only as a comparison of how feminist pedagogues ensure that teaching is about dialogue and cognitive learning instead of only a teacher speaking and students listening.

III. Non-attendance: A Study from a Teaching-Focused Canadian University

Despite having evidence of positive correlation between class attendance and exam scores some students often miss classes. This study shows that attendance is affected significantly after the students receive grades for their midterm exams. Instructors can marginally increase attendance in class by making the lectures more resourceful and fun, and by aligning the lectures with tests.

III. How to Handle Harry: The Legacy of the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation and the Longer History of Technology Transfer

Current scholarship on technology transfer in U.S. universities coalesces around the Bayh-Dole Act of 1980 and the subsequent emergence of academic capitalism as a funding structure in higher education. This paper argues that the narrative of academic capitalism truncates a heated debate over university patenting that dates back to 1925 when a group of professionals formed the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation to translate conceptions of science, the market, and democracy into a durable form.

II. Analysis of the Impact of the Closure of a Laboratory School on House Prices
This study examines the impact of the sudden closure of a public laboratory school on nearby house prices. The study uses a difference-in-difference approach with spatial effects in an hedonic model. It compares house prices in the attendance zone of the closed school (a treatment group) with house prices in a comparable, adjacent neighborhood (a control group), before and after the closure. We find that the closure reduced house prices in the attendance zone by about 5 to 10 percent.

IV. Food-based Cooperatives to Feed the Family in Northern Manitoba

Producer cooperatives offer a means of community development and food security in regions of underdevelopment. In this case study we examine both a fishers’ cooperative and a food production located in a fly-in community of Garden Hill First Nation in Northern Canada. Analysis of business plans and livelihoods found that local food production and marketing had the greatest utility to reduce the food insecurity rate of 86% and cut the 76% unemployment rate.

I. Surfing into Samādhi: Rediscovering the Elements in India's Coastal Villages

This is a three-part 90-minute session with two presenters. In the first 30-minute portion, Christopher Miller will present an abridged version of his thesis discussing the religious dimensions of the countercultural surf community in South India as they confront the ecological challenges in their coastal villages. Then, Fancy Fechser will present her documentary film depicting this surf culture and the current ecological and social projects that she and professional surfer Brad Gerlach are undertaking with them to confront these challenges, including their drive to bring more surfboards to the coastal villages as well as to assist them with organizing beach clean ups. Finally, we will close the session with a discussion regarding the current state of affairs and leave time for Q&A.

IV. Sara Crew as the Little Memsahib: Domestic Empire and the Colonial Mistress in Frances Hodgson Burnett’s A Little Princess (1905)

This paper examines Frances Hodgson Burnett’s A Little Princess (1905) in relation to the figure of the memsahib and how it influences Sara’s identity. It seeks to argue that by constructing Sara as the ideal girl, Burnett projects her desires of an ideal woman who is a colonial mistress that governs her domestic colony with a nurturing hand. In order to achieve this vision, Burnett attempts to erase the historically troubling character of the memsahib and romanticizes her through Sara’s kindness and charity. Yet, the figure of an eleven year old girl as a memsahib ultimately amounts to an absurd fantasy that underscores the destabilization of British Empire at the turn of the nineteenth century.

IV. Writing and the Seeming Recalcitrant - Project Management as a Tool in Writing and Research

We rely on students being self-managing. Students who lack inherent project management (PM) skills may not finish degrees, losing focus in the thesis stage. Even competent thinkers may need help to define tasks to complete a large work or to manage stakeholders and time.

Experience in large industry teams led to the application of a PM framework with scholars completing master and PhD theses, articles, and books. Explicit training in project management can help people finish long documents.

I. Religion, Philosophy, and Science: Their Earliest Interplay

Religion came first (10,000 years ago with urbanization) but science followed much later (2,600 years ago). These fields of inquiry have always shared an intimate connection; they have been inspired by the wish to understand the phenomena of nature. Could religion have been a stimulus for the birth of science? And if philosopher Bertrand Russell is right that “philosophy is something intermediate between theology and science,” could philosophy have played a role in this event too?

What led to the intellectual transition from mythology to science in ancient Greece? The factors that are generally accepted as having created favorable conditions for such transition were geographic, economic, religious, and political. In this paper I add to the usual list of factors three new ones, the ancient Greek idiosyncrasy, the power of the Greek language, and the effect of making a habit of scientific thinking.

I. Locating Disability in the Body Positive Campaigns: Advertising & In/Exclusion

This paper explores a three stage history of the advertising industry’s movement from near total exclusion of people with disabilities in advertising imagery to very limited inclusion to more progressive campaigns. I argue that the advertising industry helps to construct the symbolic meaning attached to disabled identity and as such, it plays a central role in raising public awareness about disabled people. Campaigns like Pro Infirmis’ “Because Who is Perfect? Get Closer” challenge normative constructions of beauty as able-bodied and have the potential to broaden cultural understandings of embodied beauty and diversity.

III. Frederick Douglass and the Root of Communal Identity

In Frederick Douglass’s Narrative, Douglass alludes to his introduction into the African notion of the communal, non-individualistic self, through the person of Sandy Jenkins. Sandy Jenkins’ contribution to Douglass’s identity and well-being played a significant role in the (re-)formation of Frederick Douglass’s identity as an African-American man who would resist oppression. I maintain that contrary to the many critical condemnations of Sandy Jenkins, Jenkins should be viewed as a heroic figure.

II. Teaching the Geography of Canada: A Non-regional Approach

In most Canadian universities the geography of Canada is taught from a regional perspective which usually starts with a description of the physical geography of the country followed by a description of each region. This approach presents a deterministic geography of Canada that provides a poor understanding of the dynamics that define the country. This paper offers an alternative approach that presents a snapshot of the contemporary geographies of Canada from a less deterministic perspective.

III. The Myth of Sacred Prostitution in Ancient Israel

It is frequently asserted by scholars of the Hebrew Bible that the religious institution of sacred (or cultic) prostitution once existed in ancient Israel. This practice, it is argued, was borrowed from the Canaanite neighbors of Israel and was indicative of Israel’s religious apostasy at this time. This paper will argue, based on historical and textual evidence (both biblical and extra-biblical), that no such practice ever existed in ancient Israel.
